The logo for 'Frankly Human' is centered in the email body. It features the word 'frankly' in a light, lowercase, sans-serif font, with the word 'human' in a larger, bold, lowercase, sans-serif font directly beneath it.

Hey Caroline,

I was sitting in front of my computer sending yet another follow up email to another job application I had made. No feedback. Lots of rejections. I didn't have the EXACT experience they were asking for.

In front of me was a big pile of business cards that I had gathered from attending meetups and networking with people. Plus there were LOTS of job applications that needed to be written. I needed a job, so I could pay my rent. How many versions of my resume and cover letter do I need to make?

I was busy spinning my wheels and tapping away at my keyboard, trying to make it work... And then it hit me... I was on the right track with my commitment to “making” but I still wasn’t “making” the right things or doing them in the right order...

So little of what I was doing actually mattered!

That's when I realised an “attitude of making” must revolve around taking the RIGHT steps in the RIGHT order. I was missing the most important

FIRST step... What actually mattered to me?! So I set out with the sole purpose of figuring out what mattered most to me on this journey to change careers. News flash- it wasn't salary or job title!

I ntted out the steps to understand how I wanted to feel about myself to create a passionate, secure and fulfilled life for my newly independent self...

The best bit?

What I learned pretty quickly was that these same steps for vision and purpose setting WITH with the roadmap I've developed over the last 9 years has been instrumental in EVERY problem or project I've nailed... no matter the setting or people I have been working with.

Would you like to know these steps and my "making" roadmap?

If so, I'd love to have you join my Why Workshop for a whip through the roadmap and an engaging experience with your values and purpose.
